The Journal of Language and Politics (JLP) represents a forum for analysing and discussing the various dimensions in the interplay of language and politics. The basic assumption is that the language of politics cannot be separated from the politics of language. The notion of ‘Political Discourse’ does not remain limited to the ‘institutional’ field of politics (e.g. parliamentary discourse, election campaigns, party programmes, speeches, etc.) but opens to all linguistic manifestations that may be considered to be political, provided that it is convincingly argued what makes them ‘political’. In order to illuminate new and old forms of political discourses inter- and transdisciplinary perspectives and elaborated linguistic methodologies have to complement each other.

Articles should bring together sociological concepts, political theories, and historical analysis. Methodologies can be qualitative or quantitative and must be well grounded in linguistics or other relevant disciplines. They may focus on different dimensions (pragmatics, semantics, social cognition, semiotics) of political discourse. Since political discourses overlap with other discourses, e.g. economic and scientific discourses, perspectives of interdiscursivity and intertextuality are considered to be important. Articles based on ethnographic studies will be particularly welcome.

The Journal of Language and Politics welcomes review papers of any research monograph or edited volume which takes a discourse-analytical approach to the study of language and politics, as broadly conceived above. If you are interested in reviewing any recent, relevant text please email c.j.hart@herts.ac.uk and we can arrange for a copy to be sent to you.

The Journal of Language and Politics is associated with the book series Discourse Approaches to Politics, Society, and Culture, edited by Ruth Wodak and Grey Myers.

The two most recent issues of Journal of Language and Politics provide a set of fascinating theoretical papers as well as intriguing multidisciplinary analyses of the current and historical developments in Europe and beyond. Issue 9:3 opens up with a theoretical paper on the notions of society, polity and language community and is followed by a set of analyses of media and political language in such contexts as: Turkish accession to the EU, the H5N1 bird-flu hype in public debates in mid-2000s, constructions of Jewish identity in the famous Scholem-Arendt exchange of the 1960s, or intricate logics of the contemporary Israeli peace and academic discourse. Special Issue 9:4 is devoted to ‘Discourse and Socio-Political Transformations in Contemporary China’. It provides a range of critical analyses of contemporary Chinese media and political discourses from a set of novel perspectives. Articles included in JLP 9:4 provide a set of new frameworks for analysing and understanding the complex role of public discourse in China’s imminent rise to one of the world’s major political and economic powers.
